Coach explains rewards

Every person was born to carry out a purpose in life. In Wayne Else's case, he was born to compete and coach. The sport - rodeo.

Else's fondness for the sport took root back at his family's ranch in the Big Hole, the valley of 10,000 haystacks and home of famous ranchers.

He launched into rodeo competition when he was a senior in high school. The native Montanan went on to join the Western Montana College Rodeo Team and graduate with a degree in physical education, preparing him for his job as rodeo coach for WMC.

"Rodeo is a sport that doesn't have to end after college. It can go on indefinitely - as long as the body can take the abuse," says the 39-year-old cowboy with a chuckle.

Else, who also ranches running 100 Hereford-Simmentals and 200 sheep, says he's given up competing in the more physically abusive rodeo activities like riding bulls and bucking horses. "I did that in my younger days. Now I stick to steer wrestling and calf roping," he says.

Steer wrestling, commonly known as bulldoggin', is Else's favorite event and his specialty. Last year he placed as one of the state's top 10 bulldoggers.

But the rodeo competitor says he can't take all the credit for his success in steer wrestling. Registered Quarter horses Spiffy Bars and Speedy Bucket helped him grab more than a few ribbons. Spiffy, the bulldoggin' horse, brings the cowboy in close so he can leap off to catch the steer, and Speedy, the hazing horse keeps the steer in line.

"You have a certain pride when your horses perform really well, because you were the one who trained them," says the steer wrestler, who shoes horses and serves on Vigilante Electric Cooperative's Board of Directors.

But Else is even prouder of the performances exhibited by the members of his rodeo team.

"I really enjoy watching the kids compete and seeing them excel," he emphasized. Although the team totals 30 members, only six men and three women compete in a rodeo, so all must vie for those spots.

Last year both teams, men and women's, qualified for the College National Finals. The men's team ranked in the top 10, and the women's qualified in the top 13. Both teams are now sitting second in the region, and it looks like they'll qualify for nationals.

The coach says his motiva-

NRA president gives nod to Great Drive of '89

Northern Rodeo Association members are invited to head 'em up and move out. Yep, NRA president Tom Holland is encouraging this association's members to be a part of the Great Drive of '89.

"It will work if everyone believes it will work," says the Dillon businessman. "They've scaled down the big ideas into a workable fun cattle drive that will be a real history maker for our state."

Rodeo cowboys and cowgirls should be obvious supporters of the great drive, Holland says. It acknowledges and celebrates the very events from which rodeo evolved.

The drive will leave Roundup, Montana on September 3 and arrive in Billings on Saturday, September 9.

The Drive has had lots of organizational problems, the NRA president says. But, they've worked these problems out.

"This thing will work with 3,000 head or 10,000 head because it is a Montana event run by Montanans! NRA wholeheartedly supports the Great Drive of '89."

All the News that is news in the NRA Barrel racers please help set up the electric eye

Dear Barrel Racers;

Below is a list of who is to be in charge of the electric eyes at the rodeos for the remaining NRA season. If there are any problems with the electric eyes, all complaints will be directed towards the person who is in charge of the electric eye for that rodeo. She then can contact the barrel racing director.

Here is what each person needs to do when they're in charge of the electric eye:

1. Contact the person who was in charge of the eye at the previous rodeo to see where the electric eye ended up.

2. Find a way for the electric eye to get to the first performances of the rodeo you are in charge of and make sure the electric eye has been charged.

3. Call Central Entry to find out what girls are up in what performances (you can do this when you call back for you entries).

Contact one girl per performance and put her in charge of that performance; get all the equipment set up before and during the performance; make sure that the electric eye is shut off and given to whoever is to charge the eye for the next performance (or to whoever is to take the eye to its next destination).

4. Complete the cycle by contacting the person who is in charge of the eye at the next rodeo and decide where the eye needs to go between rodeos (so that it may be charged and sent to the next rodeo.)

The gals who are in charge of the electric eyes are not the only ones who are on the hook. We are all responsible for our event running smoothly. If you are called on to help, please be sure to do your share; and you are welcome to recruit any other help you may need (that is what the list is for.)

Directions for setting up the eye are also on the list, that should eliminate excuses.

Thanks for helping out. Hopefully, this will eliminate some of the problems that have occurred this year.

Choteau boasts best crowd in 44 years

The crowd at the Choteau July 4 rodeo was the largest in the 44 year history of the event. The weather was perfect. They figure over 4,000 fans attended.

Jacobs Livestock Rodeo Company again entertained the big crowd with snorty horses and a well-run rodeo.

Choteau Chamber of Commerce served a pitchfork steak fondue in the park before the rodeo and served 800 people!

Lewistown brags upped receipts, packed grandstand

The success of NRA-sanctioned rodeos continued in Lewistown. Lewistown News Argus spread rodeo news across three pages of their fair followup issue. The lead story— Fair receipts jump 69 percent over '88. After the downpour during the Thursday evening performance, the usual balmy weather of Fergus County prevailed and the rodeo was well attended with grandstands packed on Friday evening and Saturday.

About the rodeo, fair manager Stan Steen said, Stock Contractor Small Rodeo Company made the rodeo run smoothly. "Dale Small is hard to beat," Steen said. "We made an additional payment to him because he added a clown to the clown act.

"He is really nice to work with. He does whatever you want him to do and does it better than a lot of them."

Harlowton gate good, too

After 53 years of successful rodeos, Harlowton, the committee reports on the night of July 3, the gate receipts were the biggest ever!

Tyrel James Thurston has taken over Vaughn and Darlene Thurston's camp. Born Feb. 24, Vaughn doesn't remember how much he weighted but he's up to about 50 lbs. today and "ain't fat."

Breakaway roper Vicki Lande will marry Greg MacCarty on Sept. 16 at the Equestrian Center in Big Horn, Wyo. For those who don't know what the Equestrian Center is, that's where the polo players from Northern Wyoming, Southern Montana meet to compete!

Kip Stenson, of Choteau, and Adele Taliadro, of Dupuyer were married on June 24. Kip is a former NRA team roper.

Shari Delp and Ray Gardener were married in Belgrade on July 8. Janie and Beef Carlson stole the bride and took her to Stacey's in Gallatin Gateway. Little Shari didn't have a fighting chance so enjoyed the ride! Shari taught in Poplar last season and Ray is a Winnett rancher.

Funeral services were held in Widsom for Mark Clemow, a Big Hole Valley rancher. Mark is grandfather to NRA member Mike Pettit.

Wayne Else and the Western Montana College Rodeo team were featured in a recent article in "Rural Montana," the monthly magazine published by the Rural Electric Cooperatives in the state.

It was crowded at Kevin Hill-Laurie Hendrickson's wedding. Many people from Ronan, Arlee, St. Ignatius were in attendance.

Zane and Lyle Delp of Phoenix were home in July. The former NRA competitors lived in Hardin before moving to sunny Arizona.

Bob Turnbull and Bert Vermandel, both NRA team ropers, won the Montana Cattle Buyer's Roping in early August hosted by Chris and Vicki Brookman. Bert won two buckles that day. He teamed with Buck Bradford in the mixed roping and cleaned house!

For those who are wondering what Stan and Tootie Rasmussen are up to since they retired from the newsletter, Tootie reports life is not slow. "I guess people didn't realize that we both work. Tootie at the local newspaper the Choteau Arcanthe, and Stan owns and operate WestMont Agency. They also have about 50 head of cows, a few horses, a big yard and a house to take care of.

"And, we need a little time to spoil our grandkids," Tootie reports. "We didn't retire from everything, just the newsletter."

Tootie has also been busy promoting rodeo and letting her views be known. See her letter to the Great Falls Tribune in this NRA News.

Please cover the eyes

Dear NRA barrel Racers;
 Please cover the electric eyes on the end where the glass is while they are waiting use at rodeos. This glass is a magnifying glass and when the sunlight hits these glasses it can (and has) burned the inside of the eyes.

Please cover them, put them in a shady place or in the box until use. This will help to keep our eyes working and avoid costly repairs.

Thank you

Two Clowns?!?!?

Rewards of coaching is seeing the kids perform well

tion to do this job comes from just plain liking kids. "When you work with this calibre of kids, you realize there's a future for this county.

"They're always willing to pitch in and help with the fund-raising projects, and they have the attitude that 'if there's a will, there's a way,'" he says.

The rodeo coach recalls a time when one of his kids displayed such tenacity.

"Two weeks before our first rodeo, Don Nahrgang ran a horn into his groin. The horn went in 8 inches and ruptured an artery. He was lucky to come out alive," Else explains, while reaching for some more chew in his shirt pocket. "Two weeks later he competed in his first rodeo and took first in the bullriding event."

"That's the rewards of coaching. When you see a kid perform that well and realize how much he's grown up," says the WMC coach, who lives with his wife Lola and three children on a ranch near Dillon.

But Western's rodeo team is also reaping rewards from competing under the reins of a coach who is more than a couple of above other college rodeo coaches.

"Wayne is always around to help in some way," says Joey Nahrgang, a brother of Don. "He's either outside of the chute or standing in the box. And it doesn't matter if you're a member of the team or competing individually. He's always there watching, regardless."

Nahrgang adds, "And he never plays favorites."

It's apparent Coach Else and his 30 team members equal a unique combination - a loyal coach who goes the extra mile and a team instilled with the determination to win.

And the results show in the rodeo arena.
